Home advantage

Tips can make your house more appealing to potential buyers

By Janet Lundquist
STAFF WRITER

The behavior of potential home buyers during a walk-through is a closely studied social phenomenon.

Real estate agents have seen buyers' reactions to the good, the bad and the ugly. In the process, they have learned what environments will have the most appeal to a buyer.

There are the obvious issues the sellers should deal with before showing their home – washing the stack of dirty dishes in the sink or vacuuming the pet hair off the carpet, for instance. But there are other, more subtle things to be taken care of that real estate agents say sellers sometimes overlook.

"We have a lot of smart buyers out there right now, and there's a lot of new construction," said Jane Curtin, real estate agent with Realty Executives Success in Plainfield. "Your real challenge is competing against new construction where everything is fresh and bright."

So many thanks, so little time

Grace. It's all about grace.

I'm not talking today about our cat, who happens to have that name. And I'm not talking about the moment before dinner when we sometimes join hands, bow our heads and offer a blessing. I'm not even talking about the sort of grace that is integral to the belief in salvation that is a common thread among the planet's faithful.

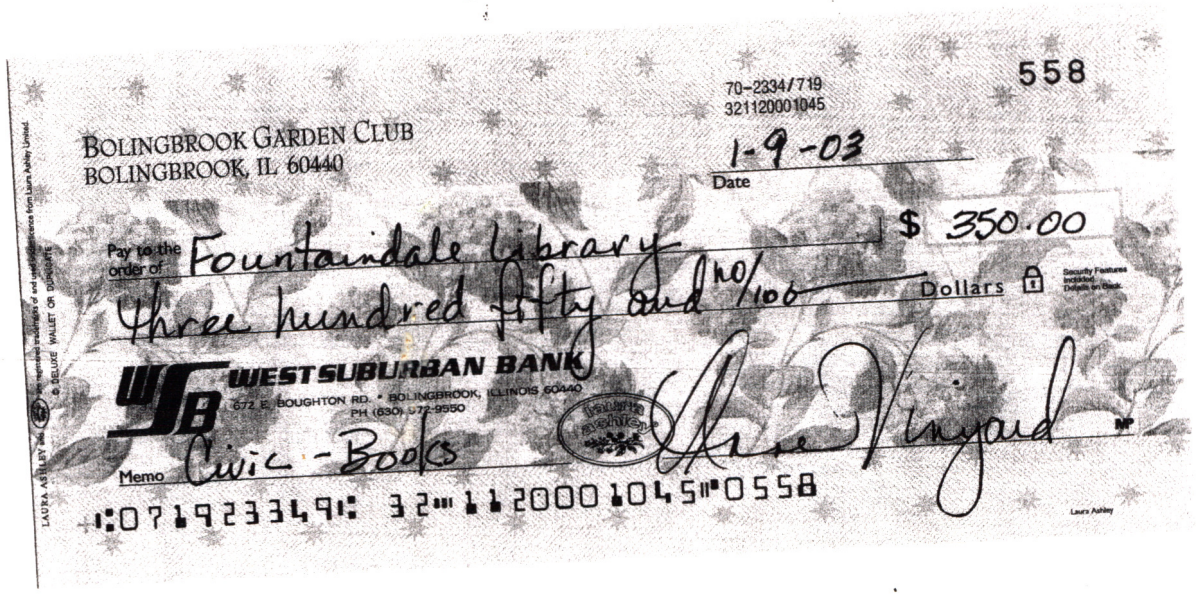

Today I refer to the sort of grace that manifests itself in humility, in sharing appreciation for things turning out as well as they do. Being gracious is an ongoing goal, at least for this correspondent. It's a work in progress.

So as Mother's Day '03 slips slowly into its slot in the memory bank, I of course want to remember to thank my family f

Dear Martha:

Enclosed is the memorial tree program certificate for the tree donated by the Bolingbrook Garden Club.

An engraved brass plate has been added to the memorial tree program plaque located in the Annerino Community Center.

Additionally, a cast metal plaque mounted on concrete has been placed at the foot of the tree.

The Park District will maintain and care for the River Birch tree planted on June 20, 2003. The tree is located on the east side of the wetlands and south of Briarcliff Drive in Central Park.

If I can be of any further assistance, please feel free to contact me at (630) 739-4696 ext. 6559.

Sincerely,

Ronald A. Bettenhausen
